

UNIVERSITY OF LEEDS

School of Fine Art, History of Art and Cultural Studies

Now you have completed 'Plan, Prepare, Provide', would you like your learning to be formally accredited as a Postgraduate certificate from the University of Leeds?

Teachers on our residential programme have commented on the 'Fabulous experience, I am leaving filled with ideas, support and motivation... I have felt valued and challenged in equal measure', and concluded that it is 'A very hands-on and authentic event run by a team of passionate and motivated teacher-educators'. Their main request has been for an accredited version of the programme, and we have now made that happen...

This exciting, new programme will enable you to build on your experience, learning and critical thinking and take your ideas back to the classroom. You will take two 30 credit modules delivered by colleagues from the University in collaboration with art and art history teachers, with support from a dedicated personal tutor.

In the first semester you take module 1, Accredited Learning from Study Days. This builds on your Summer School teaching and learning, and enables you to gain credit through critical reflection on your learning and practice.

In the second semester you take module 2, Extended Professional Work Based Learning which will see you building a project based on your professional practice. Teaching and support will be delivered through one to one tutorials and small group seminars. Both modules can be undertaken on-campus or at a distance digitally.

Modules are assessed through a combination of one essay and presentations and there will be opportunities for formative assessment. Your tutor will support you in your development of academic writing and research skills.

During your registration period, you will be a full student of the University of Leeds and benefit from our superb facilities, including our world leading libraries, and will be able to access the most current journals and books on education, art and art history.

Our programme, Developing Teacher's Research and Practice has been designed to be as flexible as possible to enable you to combine it with your busy teacher lives'.
